

We're inviting bold, community-rooted proposals that unite artistic experimentation and scientific inquiry to tackle water pollution across the Mediterranean. Come to our first webinar tomorrow!

We're excited to share that PartArt4OW has launched its Second Open Call. Please help us spread the word!

We're looking for bold, community-engaged proposals that combine science and artistic practices to prevent, study, and reduce water pollution in the Mediterranean region. From plastics to chemical runoff, noise to micro-contaminants, pollution threatens both ecosystems and communities - especially the most vulnerable.

🔍 The call is open to proposals that:

- actively engage citizens, moving beyond simple awareness-raising
- combine science-based research with experimental and understudied artistic practices
- co-create new ways of understanding and tackling pollution
- focus on the communities living in close proximity to the ocean, water basins and rivers
- address key societal and environmental challenges of those communities and amplify unheard community voices.

📅 Deadline: 2 October 2025 at 17:00 CET

📅 Call opened: 1 August 2025 at 12:00 CET

📌 More info & how to apply: <https://partart4ow.eu/second-open-call>

And if you want to know more details directly from our partners, we invite you to attend our first webinar and matchmaking session taking place tomorrow the 5th of August at 11:00 CET, please register with the following link: <https://za285qxzmpn.typeform.com/to/JAAqcLwt?typeform-source=partart4ow.eu>

Please feel free to share this with your networks, forward to relevant contacts, or post on your platforms. Every share helps us reach communities and changemakers ready to make a difference.

With thanks and appreciation,

The PartArt4OW Team
